Biographical/Historical Note

Jean Baker Miller, born in 1976, was a distinguished psychiatrist who in 1976 published the book Toward a New Psychology of Women, a book which drastically altered the conversation on women's mental health and helped to establish Relational Cultural Theory. In 1981 she was instrumental in founding the Stone Center for Development Services and Studies at Wellesley College which in 1995 would join the Center for Research on Women to become the Wellesley Centers for Women. That same year, the Jean Baker Miller Training Institute was established to educate others on Relational Cultural Theory and Miller herself served as the first director. Miller died in 2006 due to complications from emphysema and post-polio effects.

Scope and Content

The collection documents the work of Jean Baker Miller, dating from 1950 to 2006. The bulk of the records relate to her research and writings, for which Miller took extensive handwritten notes. The collection also includes correspondence and a variety of materials relating to her professional positions and her activity in psychiatry and women's health.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Arrangement

The collection is divided into six series: I. Correspondence; II. Editorial Work; III. Media; IV. Personal; V. Professional; VI. Research and Writing. Series V. Professional and VI. Research and Writing have been further subdivided into two sub-series each.

Correspondence

Scope and Content

The series includes correspondence dating from 1977 to 2006, organized chronologically. Most of the correspondence (Director of Education, Stone Center; Personal; Declined Invitations; Publishers) had been organized according to subject matter, an organization that has been maintained in the refolding process. Stray correspondence was organized as General.
