Biographical/Historical Notes

---

The Wellesley Centers for Women (WCW) was established in 1995 at Wellesley College in Wellesley, Massachusetts when the Centers for Research on Women (CRW) and the Stone Center (SC) merged into one organization committed to interdisciplinary gender research. The SC was established in 1981 as a research facility focused on psychological therapy and women. Prior to the merger, the CRW and SC were each recognized internationally as being at the forefront of social science based gender research. The CRW was originally established as the Center at Wellesley for the Study of Women in Higher Education and the Professions in 1974 through partial funding by the Federation of Professional Women. The CRW's name was changed in 1978, reflecting a commitment to broaden the organization's research scope beyond higher education and professions. The merger brought the two women's research centers together under one director and a board of overseers. The WCW's research on women and impact on policy and education is broad. Since 1974, the WCW has conducted interdisciplinary studies on issues such as gender equity in education, sexual harassment in schools, child-care, adolescent development, gender violence, and women's leadership—studies that have influenced private practices and public policy. The center continues to provide professional development for educators, child caregivers, and youth workers that encourage children's social-emotional development and enhance learning environments and safety. Other WCW scholars have dedicated themselves to the prevention of psychological problems, the enhancement of psychological wellbeing, and the search for a more comprehensive understanding of human development through theory development and research. The WCW's international collaborations strive to improve the lives of women and girls across the globe.

Scope and Content

Contains materials related to the organizational history, activities, and research conducted at the Wellesley Centers for Women (WCW) dating from 1974 through 2013. Correspondence, publications, event fliers, photographs and meeting minutes cover the creation and early organizational history of the Center at Wellesley for the Study of Women in Higher Education and the Professions, the Stone Center (SC), the Center for Research on Women (CRW), and the merger between the SC and the CRW that led to the creation of the WCW. Of note are meeting minutes and correspondence documenting the center's relationship with Wellesley College, and correspondence, meeting minutes, research projects, and policy and curriculum notes pertaining to the Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing (1995). A bulk of the records contain personal and professional records relating to the work of the WCW's third director, Susan McGee Bailey (1986-2010) which include correspondence, travel, research, and outreach she performed during her tenure as director.

Wellesley Centers For Women

Scope and Content

This series documents the history of the merger of the Stone Center and CRW that precipitated the formation of the WCW. Pamphlets, brochures, and various correspondence document the planning, research, and events that occurred alongside the 20th anniversary celebration. A bulk of this series documents the work of the WCW's director Susan Bailey McGee through mostly correspondence, but also included are minutes and planning documents for retreats, minutes for Project Director's meetings, and press clippings related to the WCW. The series also includes brochures, correspondence, and planning notes on parties and events held at the center.
