

COURSE REGISTRATION

First and foremost, talk to your class dean, professors, department chairs and first-year advisors about your courses! They're here to help you construct a well-rounded, thoughtful degree.

When registering for classes, here are some things to consider:

CLASSES

Do you want a class with lots of:

- Class participation?
- Group work?
- Papers?
- Exams?
- Oral presentations?

PROFESSORS

Do you prefer professors who:

- Lecture most of the time?
- Provide lots of time for class discussion?
- Expect you to post on a class conference?

BE SURE TO KEEP IN MIND:

- Distribution Requirements
- Major Requirements
- Study Abroad Options
 - What do you need to take at Wellesley before you leave, so you can finish your major(s)/distribution reqs when you return?
 - What classes do you think you'll be able to take abroad?
 - How will those credits transfer?

TIPS FOR CHOOSING COURSES:

- Remember that you can always switch classes during add-drop period so don't be too stressed about perfecting your class choices now.
- Take classes that interest you, not just the ones you "have to."
- Don't be afraid to ask upper-class women about their experiences. Another resource is the Opinions Conference.
- Make sure you have completed prerequisites required for the course.
- Be sure to check if the course requires a separate application or professors approval to register.
- Don't forget about fulfilling the gym requirement (8 credits).
- Make several backup plans in case courses fill up before you get a chance to register.
- Don't be afraid to try something new!
